Current Brand Challenges

Through detailed SWOT analysis, partner and customer interviews we've identified our most important challenges.

Brand Identity Alignment

DermaQuest website has over 13 global versions and 3 domestic sites. Non-uniform sales and marketing tools. No unified social media message. Distributors diversion between markets.

Market Positioning Confusion

What are we? A professional brand? Retail brand or online discount store. How should the market view DermaQuest? Where do we fit in the professional skin care market?

Promotions, Pricing & Currency

Absence of promotions and consistent price hikes in a competitive market. International markets & currency fluctuations.

Product, Fulfillment, Packaging

Too many products that don't meet minimum sales requirements. Product development and fulfillment delays. Multiple versions of current packaging.

Global Compliance

Product descriptors are no longer globally aligned with the FDA, Google, or popular payment gateways like PayPal and Stripe, to name a few. Too many different versions of same product for different markets.

Ingredients & Innovation

Current Ingredients facing discontinuation, necessitating reformulation. Insufficient development of new, unique formulations for both professional and retail markets.

Skin Concerns

Skin Concerns

Hyperpigmentation

Pigmentation is when certain areas of the skin turn darker than the rest. It can appear in smaller patches, cover larger areas or in some cases, even the entire body. This happens when the skin produces more melanin than usual.

Rosacea

Rosacea is a long-term skin condition that mainly affects the face, causing tiny blood vessels or small pink or red bumps to appear. It's more common in women and people with lighter skin, but symptoms can be worse in men.

Aging

Skin aging is characterized by features such as wrinkling, loss of elasticity, laxity, and rough-textured appearance. It becomes thinner, loses fat, and no longer looks as plump and smooth as it once did.

Acne

The main symptoms of acne are spots on your face, back and chest. Your skin may be oily, or it may be hot or painful to touch. Acne is often linked to changes in hormone levels during puberty, but can start at any age. It's also known to run in families.

Acne Scarring

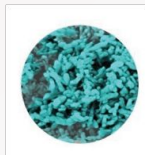

Acne scarring can sometimes develop as a complication of acne. Any type of acne spot can lead to scarring, but it's more common when the most serious types of spots (nodules and cysts) burst and damage nearby skin. Scarring can also occur if you pick or squeeze your spots.

Treatment of Hyperpigmentation in Skin

To successfully treat hyperpigmentation, you must achieve these 4 things:

1. Inhibit melanogenesis
2. Inhibit melanin transfer
3. Accelerate cellular turnover
4. Prevent recurrence

- ⬡ Cysteamine, Niacinamide, Kojic Acid, and Vitamin C all inhibit melanogenesis
- ⬡ Cysteamine and Niacinamide inhibit melanin transfer
- ⬡ Retinol can be added to accelerate cellular turnover
- ⬡ All MelaQuest family actives help prevent recurrence, with emphasis on the action of cysteamine

Key Collection Ingredients

Cysteamine

Inhibits the activity of tyrosinase. By disrupting tyrosinase function, cysteamine reduces the production of melanin precursors, ultimately leading to a decrease in melanin synthesis. This mechanism results in the lightening of hyperpigmented areas.

Clinical studies have demonstrated the effectiveness of cysteamine in treating hyperpigmentation, including melasma and post-inflammatory hyperpigmentation, to be 1.5x stronger than hydroquinone. In a randomized controlled trial, patients with melasma who applied a topical cysteamine cream twice daily for two months experienced a significant reduction in pigmentation compared to the control group.

Tranexamic Acid

Powerful tyrosinase inhibitor brightens dark spots and helps minimize melasma.

Thd Ascorbate

Stable, lipid-soluble vitamin C
protects and corrects
environmental damage.

Key Collection Ingredients

Skin Brightening Peptides

Peptides play a multifaceted role in lightening hyperpigmentation in the skin. These short chains of amino acids can influence various cellular processes related to melanin production and skin pigmentation. Oligopeptide-34 and -51, target hyperpigmentation by inhibiting tyrosinase.

Kojic Acid

Powerful depigmenting agent known for its ability to lighten hyperpigmentation in skin. Its mechanism of action involves inhibiting tyrosinase. Kojic acid works by chelating copper ions within tyrosinase, which are necessary for the enzyme's activity. This chelation process impedes the conversion of tyrosine into dopaquinone, a crucial step in melanin production.

Niacinamide

Also known as vitamin B3, is a highly effective ingredient for lightening hyperpigmentation in skin. It inhibits the transfer of melanosomes (pigment-containing organelles) from melanocytes to keratinocytes, thus reducing the delivery of melanin to the skin's outer layers. Secondly, it downregulates the expression of genes associated with melanin synthesis, including tyrosinase, the key enzyme involved in melanin production. Furthermore, niacinamide has anti-inflammatory properties that can help mitigate the inflammation often associated with hyperpigmentation.

Key Collection Ingredients:

Ferulic Acid

Ferulic acid is a potent antioxidant found in various plant-based sources, known for its ability to provide protection against the damaging effects of UV radiation on the skin. Ferulic acid neutralizes free radicals generated by UV exposure, which are responsible for oxidative stress and cell damage. Ferulic acid helps safeguard the skin's DNA, proteins, and lipids from degradation, reducing the risk of premature aging, photoaging, and skin cancers caused by prolonged sun exposure. Moreover, ferulic acid has been studied in combination with other antioxidants like Vitamin C and E, exhibiting a synergistic effect that enhances its photoprotective properties. This makes ferulic acid a valuable ingredient in sunscreens and skincare formulations, contributing to the maintenance of healthier, more resilient skin in the face of environmental stressors..

Phytic Acid

Phytic acid possesses antioxidant properties that protect skin from the harmful effects of UV radiation. Phytic acid counteracts the damaging impact of oxidative stress, cell damage, and premature aging of the skin. By neutralizing free radicals, phytic acid helps to mitigate the potential for DNA mutations, collagen degradation, and inflammation. Additionally, phytic acid has shown promise in inhibiting the production of melanin, which can result in a reduction of hyperpigmentation and an even skin tone.

Key Collection Ingredients

Citrus Stem Cells

Citrus stem cells possess antioxidant capacity that lends itself to the repair and rejuvenation of skin. Extracted from the stem cells of citrus fruits, these potent antioxidants effectively combat the oxidative stress induced by UV/environmental exposure. By neutralizing free radicals and reducing the resulting cellular damage, citrus stem cells help restore skin's vitality and resilience.

Alpha Lipoic Acid

Alpha Lipoic Acid (ALA) is a potent antioxidant that holds a unique dual solubility property, being soluble in both water and oil. This allows it to fully penetrate skin and access all parts of the cell, providing comprehensive antioxidant protection. It's regularly referred to as the "universal antioxidant," and is believed to be one of the most promising antioxidant developments of our time. Its actions extend beyond the initial neutralization of free radicals; it also aids in the regeneration of other antioxidants like vitamin C and E, enhancing their longevity and boosting their effectiveness. The regular application of ALA in skincare can lead to a visible reduction in fine lines and an improved skin glow, promoting a healthier, more youthful appearance.

Key Collection Ingredients

Orange Peel Oil

Orange peel oil, aka sweet orange oil, is a potent source of vitamin C and antioxidant benefits. Extracted from the peels of ripe oranges through a process called cold pressing, this oil carries a refreshing and zesty aroma. In skincare, it's recognized for its ability to hydrate and stimulate the production of collagen, thus promoting skin elasticity and reducing the appearance of wrinkles. Furthermore, its antiseptic and anti-inflammatory properties make it an effective ingredient in combating acne and promoting a healthy, radiant complexion. However, it is phototoxic and should be used with care, especially under sunlight exposure.

Idebenone

Idebenone, a synthesized version of Coenzyme Q10, is an equally potent antioxidant. Its primary function is to produce Adenosine Triphosphate (ATP), which helps maintain energy levels within cells.

Key Collection Ingredients

Coenzyme Q10

Coenzyme Q-10. Also known as ubiquinone and CoQ10, Coenzyme Q10 is naturally occurring in cells, supporting electronic transport to the mitochondria, and to promoting their oxygen utilization. It is essential to the body's production of ATP, a source of stored energy in the cell. The stronger the intercellular ATP, the more youthful and vibrant skin becomes.

Thd Ascorbate

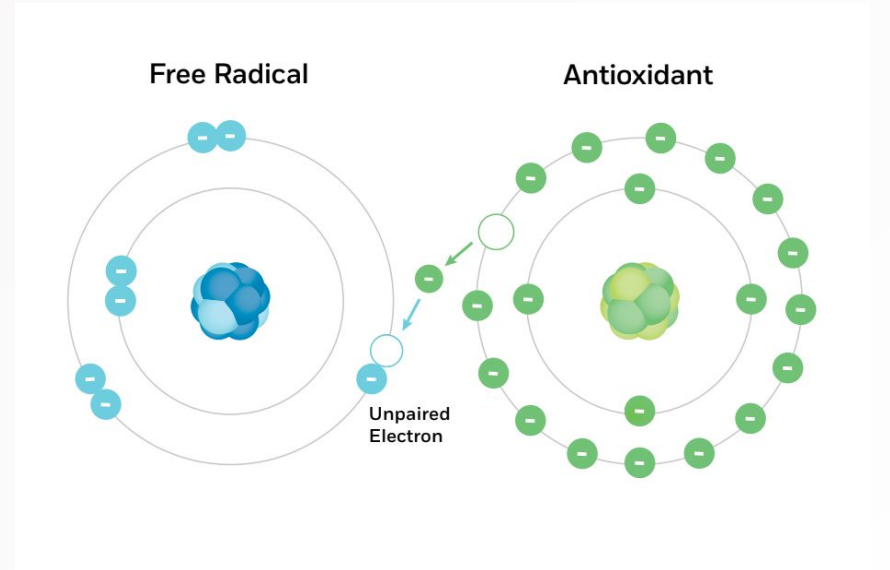

Stable, lipid-soluble vitamin C
protects and corrects
environmental damage.

C Infusion Science

Oxygen, the life-sustaining element, plays a crucial role in our existence on Earth. However, it can also contribute to aging and illness in humans. Scientists have discovered that free radicals, formed during normal bodily processes, can cause cellular damage, leading to aging and illness. Oxygen is a critical component of many free radicals, leading to heavy oxidative damage, especially inside of the body comes crucial in staving off the signs of photoaging and preserving radiant skin health. In this module, we will explore how to keep skin protected and youthful.
